- Rear Sway Bar and Endlink Bushings
- Shifter Stabilizer Bushings (Manual Transmission Only)
- Ball Joint End Boots
- Tie Rod End Boots

Characteristics:

- Increases vehicle stability and control as well as durability.
- Reduces wheel hop and traction loss.
- Made of Energy's HYPER FLEX performance polyurethane to add performance and durability
- Heavy duty metal components are used, for increased strength, when applicable
- A real must to use for sport compact competition and performance uses.

The difference between the red and black Energy Suspension bushing:

The only difference between the red and black parts is that most Black Energy Suspension parts are Graphite Impregnated. This serves to help self lubricate the bushings. The Red parts do not have this characteristic. Aside from the actual color and the lack of being Graphite Impregnated - the red parts are essentially the same as the black. The red parts have the same durometer (hardness) as the Black parts and differ only in their actual appearance (color) and the fact that they're NOT graphite impregnated like the Black parts.
